SECOND DAY OF CONVENTION.

The womens suffrage convention met yes terday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the M. E. church. The committee on organization submitted the following report, which was adopted: President, Mrs. M. E. Lease; vice president, Mrs. Anna Johnson; secretary, Mrs. Collings; treasurer, Mrs. Dr. Naunie

A committee on resolutions was appointed lack of time. A constitution governing the the society was adopted. Miss An-thony made a short but pointed find something that suited his fancy speech urging the society to work ompleted the morning session.

The afternoon session opened with prayer from Mr. Branscombe, the candidate for governor on the prohibition ticket. During the course of the meeting he was called upon to address the convention. The deceased was with Grecian history. She was very generous to those ladies who are opposed to woman suffrage. She thought it was a matter of indifference and due to the fact that they had not given the matter much thought.

This completed the afternoon session. The evening session was held in the G. A. R. hall. A large crowd had assembled at the appointed hour. Mrs. Colby opened the meeting by select reading, Mrs. McCoy short time ago for passing counterfeit gave an original temperance allegory which was well received.

Mrs. M. E. Lease introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Anthony, in a few very appropriate remarks. The speaker commenced by inviting the gentlemen to the front seats. She was of the opinion that they were the persons who she was anxious would hear what she had to say. It is possible to give only a few points concerning her lecture. She referred to the history of the poor laboring man of England. His history for a century was told. His advancethe government she thought was only similar to what will occur in this country in tho way of giving the ladies a voice in the affairs of state.

She thought the present treatment of the ladies was taxation without representation. She was of the opinion that the condition of the Russian slave is as good as that of the
